

Say Tiger Productions

Teresa Willis in a scene from Fringe Festival's "Eenie Meanie."

'Eenie Meanie' wins Acclaim

Cincinnati Fringe Festival's "Eenie Meanie" earns the first Enquirer Acclaim Award of the 2006-07 season. Kentucky native Teresa Willis' monologue about how racism touched her life over the course of 40 years was among the festival's most popular entries.

The Acclaims celebrate all the best of Cincinnati theater – professional, alternative, university and everything in between. The category of Acclaim wins aren't announced until the awards ceremony on May 21, 2007.

Acclaims are voted on by a panel of experts and applaud work on local stages throughout the season. Bios and winners throughout the season can be found at Cincinnati.

Com, keyword: Acclaim, where you can also find the list of winners from 2005-06, which were announced at the first annual awards program in May.

Jackie Demaline

THE ENQUIRER
ACCLAIM
AWARDS